The James River storm began about thirtyfive miles southwest of Springfield, and gradually increased in size and power until, at fourteen miles from its starting point, it had attained a width of 1,800 feet. From here to a point eight miles beyond Marshfield, a total distance of forty-six miles, it has cut an unbroken swath, varying from 1.500 to 2,000 feet wide, almost totally destroying every thing within the limits of this belt. Men, women and chil-dren are killed or crippled; horses, cattle, sheep and hogs are in a similar condition; houses, fences and outbuildings not only leveled, but blown away; plows, wagons, reapers and other farming are reduced to scrap iron and kindlingwood; and in many cases fields with growing crops are so covered with forest debris or with mud and sand from the streams that much additional labor is required to CONGRESSIONAL.

In Marshfield, eighty-six deaths have occurred to date—about 10 per cent. of the population. Forty-nine are now in the hospital, which is in charge of St. Louis nurses, and of these three will probably die. The destruction of the families of those adults who have been killed is, or will be, most pituable. The towns of Lebanon and Springfield and the people of the counties adjoining are doing nobly, but the destruction is so great and so wide-spread that what has been done up to the present time is very inadequate to effect what should be done. The humorous features of the average Democratic Convention are always worthy of notice; those of the late meeting of the chiefs of the Democratic party of New York are especially so. They commenced with the temporary organization. Mr. Lester B. Faulkner, in calling the assembly to order, declared that "Democrats would is a sacrifice their Democratic principles in order to gain success." At this evidence of broad humor on the part of the speaker the Convention smiled grimly. When the speaker intimated that Tilden with the success of the sacrification of the speaker intimated that Tilden with the success. strife, a delegate cried: "He's a cow-ard!" When the speaker stated that ime. The Turkish Government shows he was not informed whether "the distinguished citizen" (Tilden) would again accept a call to official "posi-tion," there was loud laughter. When again accept a call to official the Tilden Committee on Contested Seats reported in favor of all the Tilden paper delegates, in advance of the report of the minority, an indignant member protested loudly against the infamy; but he was promptly hissed and howled down. Until this vote, which was conclusive of the absolute ownership of the machine by Tilden, the assembly acted like a parcel of maniacs; but, the victory having been won, the discomfited minority sank into sullen silence and listened without interest or emotion to the reading of Tilden's manifesto in the form of a series of resolutions. The authorship of the resolutions is not a matter of the least doubt; they bear the ear-marks of the hero of Cipher Alley. The sentences are long and involved, but they treat from first to last of the great defrauded and his claims to a second term. They assume the election of Uncle Sammy in 1876, and with rare humor refer to the alleged election of the statesman of Gramercy Park as a victory won "in the name and for the sake of reform." "Reform was necessary" in 1876, says the railwaywrecker, but the people were cheated! Let us, however, write the word reform on our banners again in this year of grace 1880, says the paralytic. Sam. - Globe-Democrat. Senstor Grover, of Oregon, is dangerously sick, and the Democrats are trembling lest he may die. His term does not expire till March 3, 1883, and as the Oregon Legislature is Republican, his death would make room for a Republican successor. For this It is extremely probable that Uncle Frammy will be the nominee of the Democratic party; and, we may add, also probable that the Tammany faction is Republican, successor. For this reason such Democrats as feel authorized to pray are praying for his recovery.

It was Horace Greeley who said that "All Democrats were not horse-thieves, but all horse thieves were Democrats." In the progress of civilization horse-stealing has gone out of fashion, but while Democracy lasts plugs and shoulder-hitters will exist, and it will still be true that though all Democrats are not plugs, all plugs are Demo-erats.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Springfield Union preaches orthodox political gospel when it says: "The cohesion of a political party is based upon the principle that the majority shall rule. Everybody knows more than anybody." If a party is so bad that a good man cannot trust its majority, he had better keep out of it, It was conceded, even by their sup-and if he declares in advance that he porters, that the Democratic leaders in will not trust the majority, he is out of will not trust the majority, he is out of it, and has no right in its deliberations.

Journal. ber Gloating over a Democratic victory gained at a recent election at Yazoo City, Miss., a local organ declares that the "fact has now been demonstrated beyond a doubt that the true Democracy is determined never to be put down by any opposing faction," and "it is time for the negro to see that as a political factor he is dead, except as a means of increasing the strength of the South in the electoral college and in Congress.' If the negro doesn't see it everybody else does. Northern Democrats do not own up to it quite so frankly as this, however. - Chicago Journal.

"This issue," proceeds the great income-tax fighter, "precedes and dwarfs every other. It imposes a more sacred duty upon the people of this Union than ever addressed the consciences of freemen"!

This calculation of the exact number of unterrified Democrats who voted for the hero of Cipher Alley – 4,300,316—would seem to most persons a sufficiently clear indication of the duty of each and every one of them to repeat his vote of 1876 in 1880 for the tenderhearted old uncle of his nephew.
